

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

In a communication control apparatus and method of the present invention, a current state of communications in a predetermined route on an IP network is detected. In response to a request for connecting a new call to the predetermined route, it is determined whether the request is accepted or rejected, based on a result of comparison of the detected state of communications in the predetermined route and a maximum amount of traffic of packets permitted for the predetermined route.

5

10

15

20

25

30

35